[imagesource: Minghui Yuan/IGPOTY] The shot of the cute little guy in the image above was captured by Minghui Yuan, who received a commendation from the judges of this year's International Garden Photographer of the Year Awards. My 'garden' consisted of one plant on a balcony, which was blown away by those epic Cape winds a while back, so my career as a garden photographer was over before it began.

Best entries for the International Garden Photographer of the Year competition and accompanies a major exhibition at the Royal Botanic Gardens, Kew, in May 2011 and touring the UK and USA (to be confirmed) thereafter. 'The contemporary camera maybe a technological marvel but it can't take photographs, only the photographer can do that. To succeed it involves making an incredible complex of choices and only one chance in the entire history of time to make them as close to perfect as possible. A carefree snap - easy, a composed and considered picture, well, that requires a synergy of skills and perhaps a dash of genius. So that's why this album is such a treat to revel in, its a feast of the worlds best gardens, gardeners, the plants and animals growing and living in them in the very best photographic forms. The

The International Garden Photographer of the Year competition was established in 2008, and is the world's premier competition specialising in garden, plant, flower and botanical photography. This book brings together the very best images from the first five years of the competition in one beautiful volume. Garden photography is a hugely diverse photographic subject, combining artistic interpretation with the wonders of the natural environment around us. For some it's about a love of the beauty of plants; for others it's an opportunity to express an appreciation of the wider natural landscape and its inherently fragile nature. Ultimately, it's about a love of the diversity of the natural world and its ability to continually surprise, inspire and delight. From an exquisitely detailed close-up of a delicate flower to sweeping, panoramic garden vistas, this book showcases the talents of some of the world's best garden photographers, both professional and amateur.

Full of images, this book showcases entries from the second 'International Garden Photographer of the Year' competition. Gardening is a popular hobby all over the world and the competition captures international gardens in both large and small sizes. The book of entries will display the pictures from young and old, amateur and professional photographers alike.
